About Renée Laprise

Born and raised in Southern Ontario, Renée has a BFA from the University of Toronto and currently lives and creates in Prince Edward Island. After years of working to find her voice as an artist, Renée has developed a style that is uniquely hers. The stories told in each painting are inspired by Renée's past and present day experiences intermingled with nature and local landscapes. Underlying all of her work is an intense interest in the mystical interconnection of the physical and non-physical realms.

'The Crows Know'

Under the full moon's glow, the birch trees stand like silent guardians. A cosmic river, thick with stars, cuts through the snow, a path often overlooked yet somehow always known.

This forest holds the wisdom of the in-between, where time bends, and the veil between worlds grows thin. The crows know the way. Some gather in the branches, others pepper the sky flying freely between the physical and non-physical planes. They are messengers, keepers of the secrets of there and here.

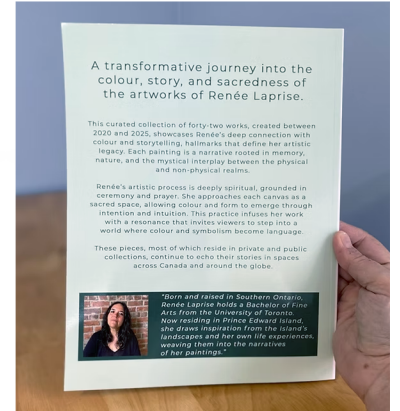

This piece is an homage to the crows of my local park which has given me years of connection to Mother Earth. A place in the city where every evening the thunderous ruckus of thousands of crows reminds us that we are never bound to just one world.
